Area News – Summer 2015

2015 Dove Hunting Outlook:

Lake flooding has impacted dove hunting potential at Council Grove Wildlife Area for the 2015 season. One 15 acre sunflower field planted near the Neosho River was lost to flooding. Another 13 acre field planted to corn and planned to be mowed for doves was removed from consideration after portions of the field and other nearby crops were also lost to flooding. A third field survived flooding however and should provide fair dove hunting opportunity at Council Grove Wildlife Area. The surviving field is a 13 acre sunflower tract near Munkers Creek. Portions of this field will be mowed (if conditions allow) to enhance dove use and hunter access. The field can be accessed from the west by walking approximately 0.25 mile east of the parking area at the south end of 850 Road. The field can be accessed from the south by walking approximately 0.25 mile north of the eastern most parking area along the north side of Munkers Creek. Dove hunters may be asked to obtain a permit prior to hunting and to report harvest at the conclusion of their hunt. Please assist area staff with evaluating these opportunities by following instructions located at permit stations posted at each field. Hunters are also reminded to please be courteous and aware of other hunting parties while using this field! For a brochure and map of the entire wildlife area please visit the Council Grove Wildlife Area web page (ksoutdoors.com) and click on the general information tab at the top of the page. For more information please call area manager, Brent Konen, at #620/767-5900.
